CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION BILL IS IN THE HOUSE*Three Measures Providing for Move Introduced Today.*SUNDAY BASEBALL FIGHT ON*Philadelphia Member Will Insist Upon Consideration of Its Measure; It Has Support of Fayette Members But Cochran Would Amend It.

Special to The Courier. HARRISBURG, Jan. 29.—Three bills calling for a constitutional convention to be held in Philadelphia were presented to the House this morning by J. H. Scott of Philadelphia.

The bills provide that the question of calling the convention be submitted to the voters at the election in November.

A number of important bills were referred to committees in the House today by Speaker George E. Allen. They will come up for first reading if they come out of committee next Monday night.

A bill for the registration of lobbyists was presented by Representative George A. Baldwin of Beaver in the House. It is declared an emergency measure for the immediate preservation of public safety.

If the bill is presented in the House yesterday by George W. Williams of Erie county becomes a law, the State employees, the county employees and employees in third class cities may come under a proposed Civil Service Commission, composed of three citizens to be appointed by the Governor, who will have the power to hold examinations, remove from office for incompetency and hold investigations regarding efficiency and number of employees in any department under the service. The bill also provides for more than 250,000 persons under the service and makes it optional with other counties and cities of the third class.

Larry Humes of Crawford county is the author of a measure to amend the act of May 11, 1901, providing for the removal of judges. Hereafter judges must be removed on account of physical or mental disability to perform their judicial functions were allowed full pay during their unexpired terms and half pay for the remainder of their lives.

The proposed Humes law provides that judges who by reason of disability have not performed their duties for one year the Governor shall appoint a commission consisting of three shrewd and disinterested physicians from different counties of the State to examine the judge and if the commission report him permanently incapacitated to perform his duties, the Governor shall notify the judge and if he resigns within 30 days of the notice he shall receive one-half salary for the rest of his term.

A bill empowering the City Treasurer to collect all the city, county, school and poor taxes in the third class has been presented in the Senate by Senator E. E. Bettelman of Dauphin county and referred to the Judiciary general committee.

The City Treasurer is empowered to appoint as many deputies as necessary and the Treasurer shall pay the deputies as collectors for and the particular tax to be fixed by the respective authority levying the tax.

Following an attack made on the Withbank bill permitting Sunday baseball between the hours of 3 and 8 p. m. by a Philadelphia minister, Representative James H. Withbank, the author of the bill, declared this morning that he will insist on having the bill put on the House calendar, if it is negated by in committee.

Mr. Withbank said today that he would make a determined fight to have the bill placed on the calendar, which will require 40 votes, according to the new rules of the House.

"I am 73 years old," said Mr. Withbank, "and have never seen a professional baseball game in my life, but I do know that there are thousands of baseball fans all over this State who want the game on Sunday."

Representative Withbank declared that there are thousands of young men who work in glass factories, mills, coal mines and factories throughout the State who are not able to see a baseball game on any other day than Sunday. He said that many of the ardent fans will "lay off" from their work a day to see a baseball game and then spend another day's wages to pay the expenses of the day they did not work.

The baseball bill will probably be amended from the Democratic side of the House of Representative Ansel Uman of Williamsport said today that because which he is the Mayor of Erie, he is an advocate of the bill. James Keegan of Fayette is a strong advocate of the Sunday baseball game. Representative Harry Cochran of Fayette county was the author of the bill. He is an old baseball player and brother-in-law of Pitcher Horn now under contract with the Philadelphia Nationals.

STEEL MEN WHO CAME HERE STILL LOOKING FOR A SITE*Ohio Towns Have Hopes of Landing Plant Which Was to Have Come Here; No Choice Made.

The proposed concern that was to be known as the Connellsville Steel Company and the new location on the J. A. Gutter farm, is seeking other sites.

The consideration that was given Connellsville is reported transferred to several other places without any apparent approach towards a decision upon a desired town or city. The Cleveland Iron Trade Review says of the project:

"Open-hearth steel sheet and tin bars, steel sheets and black plates will be manufactured by a proposed company being promoted by Archie Smith, Foreman, and other experienced steel men formerly employed by the Allegheny Steel Company. The company will be incorporated soon, according to present plans, and a site chosen within a few weeks."

"As the company expects to sell the greater part of its sheet and tin bar production, an Ohio site may be considered, if arrangements can be made to obtain hot metal from some blast furnace. In this connection, Cleveland has been viewed by some back of the project as an ideal location. Other places which have been given consideration, all in Pennsylvania, are Sharpsville, Sharon, Connellsville, and some locations on the Monongahela river."

"The heavy consumption of sheet and tin bar at Canton, Massillon and Canal Dover, O., may be an important factor when a decision as to location is made and may have a strong bearing on choosing Cleveland."

"About 700 men will be employed in the operation of the works when completed and the monthly payroll will reach $500,000. Because of its size there is likely to be some sharp competition among the towns and boroughs that are interested in securing the industry."

NEGRO HURLED TO DEATH BLASTING STUMPS ON FARM*Blown Into Air Attempting to Light Fuse Second Time.*AGING SON OF THE FARMER*Men Lighted Dynamite With Sticks From Nearby Bonfire and Kinney Did Not Know His First Attempt to Set Off Blast Had Been Successful.

Special to The Courier.

MOUNT ELIASBURG, Jan. 29.—Down into the air when a stick of dynamite beneath a stump had exploded, Albert Kinney, colored, 53 years old, was instantly killed yesterday on the Williams Byers farm, two miles from this place. Kinney was attempting to light the fuse a second time, thinking his first effort had failed.

The man was hurled a dozen feet in the air, landing on his head and shoulders. Death was instantaneous. Kinney and Joseph Byers, son of the man owning the farm, were blasting stumps. They were touching off the fuses from sticks which they lighted from a nearby fire.

The man had placed the dynamite beneath a stump and set off the first. Thinking he had failed to ignite the explosive, he returned a second time with his lighted stick. As he again attempted to apply the burning brand he set off the dynamite.

The body was taken to Zimmerman's undertaking establishment in Mount Pleasant. Coroner H. A. McMurray was notified. Kinney was one of the best known negroes of this section. For several years he has attended the National Guard encampments, being attached to the headquarters of the Tenth regiment.

The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon at the Methodist Episcopal Zion church, in the Middle Presbyterian cemetery.

IN CIVIL COURT*Minor Cases are on Trial at Uniontown This Week.

UNIONTOWN, Jan. 29.—In the suit of Dr. C. A. P. Yuk, a Pittsburgh osteopath, against John Catlett and others to recover $83 for professional services, the jury returned a verdict in favor of the defendants.

The suit of James H. Burford against W. J. Ratney and Special Policeman John H. Richards is still on trial. Burford asks damages for alleged false arrest and for the arrest of his wife. The case was continued to the 31st.

The suit of J. K. Brewer against Thomas Craback, an action in appeal, was called for trial this morning and is still on.

A divorce was granted Victor T. Nothard against Zona T. Nothard, cruel and inhuman treatment being charged. The husband lives at Point Marion.

Columbia Madden of Dunbar has entered an action in divorce against David Madden, cruelty being alleged.

DEADLOCK IS SERIOUS*Hitch in Senate May Affect Firemen's Strike Plan.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Unless the Senate ratifies the firemen's strike plan, the firemen's strike plan will be broken before Saturday. It is probable that the arbitration board created under the Erdman act to arbitrate railroad disputes, will face a serious strike.

Charles F. Neill, who is one of the three members of the board, has been recommended by the House for re-appointment. If the re-appointment of Neill is not sanctioned, the board will be deadlocked.

The situation is the more critical in view of the fact that the firemen's strike plan is being held up by the House. The firemen demand increased wages, and the officials of the roads are adverse to granting the demands. The men threaten to tie up all traffic on the roads unless they receive some concessions.

PLAYHOUSE BURNS.*Fire Destroys It on a Fayette Street Vacant Lot.

Fire destroyed a children's playhouse on an improved lot on Fayette street and caused an alarm that called out the automobile truck yesterday afternoon. The firemen made no effort to prevent the destruction of the miniature building. The loss was about five dollars.

The playhouse was near the home of Miss Eliza Dushhand, at White street. The children had built a fire in a stove and had left for school. In their absence the wood ignited. Excitement over flying sparks resulted in the alarm.

Has the Grip. Louis Rapport, of Sedarsky & Rapport, has been admitted to the South Side State hospital for treatment of the grip. His sister, Miss Little Rapport, arrived here from Pittsburgh this morning.

Blackboard Carves Kiosk. Business men and residents of the north end of town are complaining against the action of the Pennsylvania railroad in blocking the Pittsburgh street crossing at frequent intervals.

LATROBE TO RECLIN IN SIX MONTHS IS COFFEY'S GUESS*West Penn Superintendent Predicts Rapid Progress on New Bag-galey Extension.

That West Penn trolley cars will be running between Latrobe and Leola before six months are over, is the prediction by Superintendent of Transportation M. A. Coffey.

"We'll have cars running between Latrobe and Leola before six months, if the weather doesn't become so rough as to make outdoor work impossible," said Mr. Coffey after looking over the work on the new line.

At the end of the line between Bag-galey and Whittier is done, and the laying of track and stretching of trolley wire will be started soon. The work between Leola and Latrobe is progressing satisfactorily. Among the material received this week were a carload of poles and a carload of ties.

PROJECT IS DROPPED*West Penn Abandons Proposed Washington Branch.

West Penn Railways Company officials have abandoned hope of procuring a charter over East Wheeling street, Washington, to build a line from Washington to Bentleyville. It is said, since Governor Tenor has refused to approve the charter granting the Washington Traction Company the right to use the street.

Charles H. Hefel, "Seven men for a place like this—it's awful. Connellsville's too big for so few. Too much is asked of the men. Four policemen on the East Side for both day and night and only two on the West Side are not enough. Something will have to be done. Complaints have been coming in. Claims that we don't have enough protection have been made. The matter will be put up to the committee for a recommendation to Connellsville."

MORE POLICE IN BOROUGH IS PLEA OF A COUNCILMAN*Chairman Hefel Declares That Force is Much Too Small.*CALLS A COMMITTEE MEETING*Present Force is Composed of Seven Men and Hefel Declares This is Not Sufficient to Afford Proper Protection That Citizens Demand.

More police for Connellsville will be the proposition for discussion by the Police Committee before Council's first February session, according to Chairman E. G. Hefel this morning. He announced that a meeting of the Police Committee will be held as soon as the members can be assembled conveniently.

Chairman Hefel deplored the small size of the police force and said that all possible effort to again have nine policemen or more will be made.

"We don't have enough police," said Chairman Hefel. "Seven men for a place like this—it's awful. Connellsville's too big for so few. Too much is asked of the men. CHAUTAUQUA IS ASSURED BY BUSINESS MEN'S GUARANTEE*Twenty of Them Stand Sponsor for the Movement Urged for Connellsville Next Summer.

A mid-summer Chautauqua for Connellsville is now an accomplished fact. Twenty prominent business men of the borough have agreed to guarantee the success of the enterprise, and the Redpath-Brockaway Bureau, of Pittsburgh, will bring some of the most noted speakers in the country here next summer.

The Redpath-Brockaway Bureau will erect a tent on one of the largest vacant plots of ground in the borough in which the Chautauqua will be held. It will be equipped with a sufficient number of chairs to seat 2,000 persons. The sessions will most probably begin during the middle of August.

In many communities these Chautauques are the chief attraction of the year. They draw practically the entire population of the country. In many towns the stores close at 1.30 in the afternoon to the end of the session and then open only until 7.30 o'clock.

Within three or four weeks solicitors of the Redpath-Brockaway Bureau will be in town for the purpose of selling tickets. They will be held responsible for the sale of 1,000 seats.

A list of those who have agreed to hold themselves responsible for the success of the affair, follows: E. B. Harkel, Worth Kilpatrick, E. W. Harkel, E. T. Norton, E. W. Wright, J. A. Armstrong, Thomas J. Hooper, J. A. Graham, H. O. Keagy, J. C. Hoffman, J. Fred Kirtz, John Curry, W. D. McGinnis, W. T. Muir, Fred Frisbie, J. M. Reid, Logan Rush, H. C. Norton, M. Aaron, H. P. OPENING NEW MINE*Quemahoning Creek Coal Company is Rushing Work on Opening.

SOMERSET, Jan. 29.—The Quemahoning Creek Coal Company is rushing work on a new opening at their operations at Harrison in the heart of the Quaker Run region. The concern's mines are on the C. & P. main seam of coal, the first on the north side of the Quemahoning creek and the second on the south side. The company's property adjoins the line of the Somerset-Boswell cut-off of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, which provides an excellent outlet for their product and by reason of its favorable natural location is long tipples and other loading apparatus are necessary.

The Quemahoning Creek Company at present employs nearly a hundred men, shipping from six to ten cars of coal per day, and when the second opening is completed and the coal is brought to the surface on both sides of the creek, the number of men as well as the output will be at least trebled.

The officers of the company are well-known Somerset business men, as follows: President, Captain Charles J. Harrison; Vice President, John C. Harrison; and Secretary, Charles J. Harrison, Jr.

MANY INTERESTED IN EDUCATIONAL WORK IN Y. M. C. A.

Inquiries Concerning the Classes are Now Pouring In.

STUDIES COMMENCE THURSDAY

Secretary Baer, Superintendent S. P. Ashe and Other Educators Will Have Charge of the Work; Classes
Are Open to All; 46 Students Now.

The number of inquiries received at the Y. M. C. A. indicate that when the night school opens on Thursday evening at least a dozen young men will be enrolled as students. The educational work of the Association now embraces training in first aid to the injured on Saturday mornings, a class in sex hygiene for young men on Wednesday evenings, class in mining on Saturday evenings, and a class in the fundamentals of a business education on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Secretary Baer has charge of the first two, Professor J. J. Zimmerman, of the University of Pittsburgh, has charge of the class in mining, and Superintendent Stanley P. Ashe, the class in business fundamentals.

These classes are open to all who wish to take advantage of them, without charge, excepting the mining class. In this class the traveling expenses of the instructor are paid by the class. The enrollment in the mining class is now excellent. The total enrollment in educational classes is forty-six, which will probably be increased to sixty this week.

The gymnasium classes are also steadily increasing in numbers. The business men have a turn each Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoon. The seniors meet on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings. The working boys' class also meets on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings, and there is plenty of room for more boys in it. The school boys have Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons, and the high school boys have Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons. The school is overcrowded after the noon supper and Bible class on Friday evening. All the other classes have plenty of room for new members.

The Association has now provided means whereby any boy in Connelldale may earn his membership, and means are now being provided whereby any boy who cares to spend two weeks in the boys' camp may earn the necessary six dollars.

A public bean supper, to be given on Saint Valentine's evening, will give the boys a chance to earn a tidy sum, and will be credited to each in proportion to the number of tickets sold. Following this same time in March, a concert will be given and the proceeds divided in the same way. For this concert the only time the gymnasium will be given and the proceeds divided in the same way. able to earn the greater part of them. However, quite a number of boys have already begun to lay by their earnings, to make sure of having enough when the time comes. A camp program has been prepared which will mean busy and happy days for the fellows who are fortunate enough to go. While this program consists mostly of play there will also be found time for training in wood craft, life saving, first aid, self government, sex hygiene and Bible study. The camp will be entirely self governing, the only regulations being that anything that would endanger life or limbs or in any other way be detrimental to the camp is prohibited, and every camper is expected to do his best to show the other fellows a good time.

FOR A GOOD DIGESTION

A Local Druggist's Suggestion.

It has been said the body is like a machine and digestion and elimination of food are the two great factors in health.

If the digestive organs are weak, the stomach overloaded with matter accumulates in the system—the liver gets sluggish and the blood becomes thin and devalued.

We want to ask every person in this vicinity who is troubled with indigestion or a weak without stomach to try our delicious red liver and iron tonic Vinol.

No know it will strengthen and tone up the weakened, tired and overtaxed nerves of the digestive organs, create a hearty appetite, and replace weakness with strength.

We just heard of a case of a man in Ontario, N. Y., who suffered from a bad stomach trouble for fifteen years and had become so weak he could hardly walk—who was cured by Vinol.

REFORM.

The Pennsylvania Legislature has at last settled down to business and some of the Reform legislation already proposed is a measure to make the State a more efficient body.

Democratic reform is no better than the other brands of reform. The committee of this particular brand of reformers has evolved a new plan to punch the holes of the State by abolishing the institution of capital stock and corporate loans and substituting therefor an excise tax on the gross receipts of the corporation.

A more unjust and iniquitous bill was perhaps never introduced to place the luckless manufacturers of a great industrial State. To tax our manufacturers on the volume of their business without regard to the margin of their profits is to force the great majority of them to advance their prices materially or go into bankruptcy. It may be possible for some of them to do the latter, but not those who have competition outside of the State will either have to close up or break up.

Another Reform bill proposes a tax of 2 1/2% on coal production. The only possible excuse for this tax is the assumption that a large portion of the State's coal is consumed outside of the State, and that the coal consumers of our great natural resource should be taxed for the benefit of the State. Unfortunately for this theory, Pennsylvania is not the coal producing State in the Union, and a Pennsylvania tax upon this commodity is likely to be a tax upon the Pennsylvania producers rather than upon the outside coal consumers.

The Pittsburgh coal operators have just been through a determined fight against discriminatory freight rates, a fight which was but half won, and they will be seriously handicapped by a discriminatory tax imposed by the State on their product.

O. Fair Reform? How many crimes are committed in this name?

SUFFRAGISM.

The English Suffragettes are more militant than ever. They will not brook delay much less denial of their demand for an equal voice with men in the government of the nation. The postponement of action on the Suffrage bill has been the signal for fresh lawlessness on the part of hysterical women led by female fanatics. It is hard to understand how women can so unsex themselves. They certainly could not offer more convincing evidence of their unfitness for citizenship than is contained in their window-smashing and similar riotous conduct.

The word "Suffragette" is a misnomer for the English women who seek the right of suffrage. Technically, it is a woman who is a Suffragist, one who exercises the right of suffrage; and means simply, "Little Suffragist." The English women who adopted the appellation are no longer little Suffragettes, but enough to fight with the police, and to scratch like Suffragin' Cats.

The women of this country have advanced the cause of women suffrage by reason while the English Suffragettes have utterly failed to budge it by force. The velvet foot gets along faster and further than the fighting claws.

BUSTING THE BOOK TRUST.

The Pennsylvania Legislature cannot "bust" the Book Trust, but it will probably do its fair share toward that end.

A bill has been introduced providing for the printing and furnishing of all school books by the State. It is not stated whether the books are to be furnished free to the districts, or whether they will be sold to them at cost, but in either event there will be an enormous saving in the book bills.

The new plan will also insure a uniformity in text books and avoid the difficulties of children who move from one district into another, where the text books are different and the methods of teaching some branches vary widely, necessitating the pupil to go back over portions of the work he or she has already performed.

The new book proposition is destined to promote economy and efficiency.

Keystone Tube is reported on double turn. That United States Investment in steel plant manufacture promises to turn out all right after all, and none will be more pleased over such a culmination than the Conneltsville business men.

Leib's vindication was complete.

It is proposed to remove the discrimination as to the size of the front which may be taken in Pennsylvania atrocious and put the ban wholly upon the number. This is apparently a more sensible way of dealing with the problem of preserving the trout supply and it has the further merit of discouraging the fish liar.

The Somerset court won't stand for one license in two counties.

Director Horner of the Federal Bureau of Mines allies at the partnership proposition of the Weather Bureau, but he is willing that the operators and miners shall be informed concerning the state of the weather if the intelligence will make them more careful.

The Conneltsville fire truck arrived in South Conneltsville too late to bring anything but its good intentions.

If there is an international steel pool such as William Mills Cotey speaks of, why do the Canadians fear the "keen competition" of the steel Corporation when the latter's Canadian plant is completed and in operation?

Trespassing on the B. & O. seems to thrive on its own ghostliness.

The Dunbar furnace rumor won't blow out. We will hope that constant blowing will blow the furnaces in. The iron trade is good and this would seem to be a favorable season for operation.

The feet of Fayette Justice are always bathed in blood.

MERCERIZED SOCIETY

By Isaac of Yukon.

The January clearance sale of matrimonial stock in this town is at an end and our big society department is taking an inventory of possibilities for disaster sales.

The matrimonial trade in Yukon this winter has been very mesalline and "chummy." Society has been ordered even though the air at times was filled with perfect intoxication.

Our town has enjoyed a number of illustrious weddings, particularly those in Black Ch. hollow, and at each of them the drinks that were used were perfectly adjustable, so that enjoyment was elastic and Kalumzoo.

Father Time has caused trouble recently. Not that the old man has been sitting up the drinks to make some of the folks feel younger, but he has been busy furnishing a lot of our million-dollar faces with introducing new styles of chis. crinkles.

Society here, like other big towns, has been varnished, enameled, japanned and lacquered so much that it is beginning to blister and crack. A new Greek bartender has advised our cur-worm society folks to drink a mouse-line-de-sote cocktail at times when their nerve begins to get a little lingers.

Really if the green suede man knew the effect of a plain champagne and champagne drink of unblended Man-of-Valley thunders, he would not give advice to Yukon society folks who are making the town better for their living in it.

Yukon society is moving but it can't be pushed. The 75-gallon wedding with its 1-gallon accompaniment is good enough for Yukon society. We don't wish to mix up with the outside world.

Our methods of governing society functions and drilling boots for receiving lines is free to the wide world to be copied or imitated. With us, we take no substitutes.

REPORT NOT CREDITED.

Receiver Harris Says Dunbar Furnace Deal is News to Him.

Receiver W. C. Harris of the Dunbar Furnace Company, in a message to The Courier from Philadelphia, states that he has no knowledge of the deal whereby Samuel Dixon of the city would get control of the company.

Mr. Harris could give no information whether the furnace would resume at an early date.

MANY TRESPASSERS ON THE RAILROADS ABOUT SCOTSDALE

Detectives Have Been Waging War on All of the Walkers.

POSTOFFICE EMPLOYEE CAUGHT

Mail Carrier Was on His Route as Originally Laid Out Years Ago, But Permitted to Finish the Delivery; Even Railroad Men Taken In; Notes

Special to The Courier
SCOTSDALE, Jan. 28.—A vigorous following out of the publicly announced policy of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to do away with trespassing on their tracks and other property in being made noticeable in Scottdale this week.

As a result several unsuspecting citizens, probably victims of habit rather than intent, have been arrested as trespassers and sent before Justice of the Peace Rutherford. In the most of cases where these trespassing have acknowledged the error of their ways, Detective John Tefft of Connelville, who with two other detectives has been busy about Scottdale, has not pressed the charge further than the imposing of the costs, instead of demanding that the heavy fine made for such trespassing be levied.

Among those who have been found to be trespassers was one United States employee, P. D. Grunke, a letter carrier in the Scottdale postoffice, who has the American Sheet & Tin Plate Company and the Scottdale Foundry & Machine Company on his route. Mr. Grunke has been over since he was placed on the route, accustomed to going down the railroad tracks to the Foundry & Machine Company as the nearest cut, while considering it a walk in itself, saves a longer walk over the West Penn viaduct into Eversen and down the hill at that place and back again to Scottdale.

When Mr. Grunke was found walking on the track he was not slow in admitting that he was trespassing, not defending the action further than to say that the original laying out of the route included the railroad tracks. That was several years ago and when the agitation against the dangerous practice of walking on the tracks was not so great as now. He asked that he be allowed to make his delivery of mail as he was then accustomed in doing and this was allowed with notification to the postmaster H. C. Vetter of the conditions. Mr. Grunke said that he has had several narrow escapes from being run down by trains in the past and was hopeful of some other arrangement being made that would remove him from the danger zone.

Even employees of the company who use the tracks for walking on where it is unsafe for mail and the use of the tracks are simply a small reduction of their travel are being apprehended for violating the laws in regard to trespassing.

SPECIAL MEETINGS
Special meetings began at the First Baptist church Tuesday evening when Pastor W. G. Russell has associated with him and preaching for him, Rev. Rev. D. A. Kelly of Greensburg.

MORE SNOW
The people became hopeful of getting some relief when the snow began to fall Tuesday evening and covered the ground. This morning sleds were in use by several farmers who came to town by that means. Incidentally the school and business authorities are much against snow-balling on the streets and will not tolerate it. Scottdale has had some experience in this when the sleds were broken in the face of a child coming home from school and her sled run.

BASKETBALL
The Scottdale High School Athletic Association has arranged for a game of basketball with the Haddock High School team at Ellsworth auditorium on Friday evening. There will also be a fine preliminary game before the regular contest, and in consequence of having two games in one evening, the sport begins at 7:45 promptly. The Haddock team has been here before and is one of class.

Convulse the laxated bowels back to normal action with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel. ### NEW COMPANY IN FIELD

Kulkerbucker Concern Expects to Mine Big Tonnage in Somerset.

The Kulkerbucker Fuel Company with mines at Hooversville, in Somerset county, is a new firm in that field. The company expects to mine 500,000 tons during 1913.

The officers of the company are: Jas. A. Hill, New York, President; Frank A. Graff, Pittsburgh, Vice President; William J. Graff, Blairsville, Treasurer; Telford Lewis, Johnstown, Secretary. The above mentioned officers are also the directors of the company.

The statistical report for 1912 brings out the recent growth of tonnage output in Somerset county. This has now become one of the largest coal producing counties in the state. In 1912 the tonnage was less than four million tons while in 1912 it was over 10 millions. The activity of the Forehand-Walker company at Windber has been a notable feature in building up the coal business of the northern part of the country.

COAL COMES HIGH

Government Mined Black Diamonds Cost $88 a Ton.

A lot of talk at times about Government ownership of the mines, but a recent report from official sources shows that 855 tons of coal mined under Government auspices cost the buyer $85.000, making probably a record price of $88 a ton. The coal was mined in Alaska, a number of miles from the seaboard, and transportation to this was very costly.

Perhaps it is only fair to assume that Uncle Sam could do the work a little more economically than this when once started. At the same time, we doubt if a government-owned coal mine would furnish anthracite, at least, any cheaper than it has been furnished during the past dozen years or so, to six nothing of the lower records of earlier days.

WINS LONG FIGHT.

Baltimore Man Awarded Verdict from Brokerage Firm.

In a long drawn out fight Charles W. Hendley of Baltimore, was the past week awarded a verdict for $1,250 against J. K. Dimmick & Company of Philadelphia. The suit was the outgrowth of a refusal to make a portion of some contract ordered.

Won first by Hendley the jury awarded interest in addition to the bulk of the bill, but this was reversed by the Court of Appeals of Maryland. On retrial the award was as above, no interest being allowed.

An active year awaits you with great advantages in experience, but with little pecuniary success. If you are employed it will take much cleverness and attention on your part, to satisfy your employer and yourself. Those born today will have original ideas and should be encouraged to work these out, for their signs confer inventive genius. Some important discovery may be the result of their work. Their dinner will be from the great specialisation and plenty of active recreation, with cheerful companionship, is therefore necessary.

WASTED WEALTH

Yough Alone Carries Off $1,200,000 Worth of Sulphuric Acid.

One of the most interesting of the by-products of the coal mines is sulphuric acid. Coal veins contain sulphur most commonly in chemical combination with iron. The poorer the coal the more sulphur there is. Such compounds, becoming oxidized form sulphuric acid, great quantities of which in a free state are continually dripping from the mines into the rivers, says the Fuel Magazine.

The rate of this is going on at such a rate that the amount of sulphuric acid carried away by the streams of the coal region of Pennsylvania in the course of a year has been estimated by the water resources branch of the Government geological survey at $70,000,000—a quantity equal to more than two-thirds of the total sulphuric acid consumed in the United States for industrial purposes.

No less than 25,000 tons of sulphuric acid flows in a year from the town of McKeesport, in the Youghiogheny river—that is to say, 20,000 tons more than is utilized industrially in Pittsburgh and its vicinity during the same period.

To put the case otherwise fully $1,200,000 worth of sulphuric acid, produced by nature, is carried away every year by one stream in a neighborhood where the same acid is required for use by thousands of tons in factories. Here is a problem for the industrial chemist to solve—the obvious difficulty in this was being that the solution of acid is so very dilute that attempts to concentrate it would likely prove unprofitable.

Incidentally, the acid takes the stream of all their oxygen, kills the fishes and attacks structure of iron. It literally eats up bridge piers, lock gates, etc., and at the present time is making a lot of trouble in the Government canals along the headwaters of the Ohio.

SMALLER VESSELS

Believed They Will Share Bulk of the Coal Traffic on Lakes.

The belief is expressed in shipping circles that the smaller type of vessels will play a more important part in the coal traffic of the Great Lakes next winter. The largest class of carrying steamers it is said, will not seek return cargoes of coal to the same extent as usual, for the prospect is that the bulk of coal will be sent to the big boats will often go up right to save time.

If this process be true it may result in a slightly higher rate on part of the coal traffic.

COPYRIGHT 1912 BY EMERSON HOUGH

"Pick out two things there," said John Rawn, leaning back, pushing himself back from the desk. "Take a guess at the rings. What would Mrs. Rawn like; and what would about suit Miss Rawn?"

She bent above the desk, her eyes alight at the sight of the brilliance that lay before her.

"I should say your choice is excellent," Mr. Rawn said at length, gently, controlling himself. "The pendant is beautiful, set with the emeralds. And as for the rings, I'd take this one, I believe, with the two steel-blue stones."

"How much?" said John Rawn, turning to the grave and gray salesman. "The two pieces would cost you twenty-eight thousand dollars, and the latter replied, gravely and impersonally.

"Miss Delaware," said John Rawn, taking from his pocket his personal checkbook, "oblige me by making out a check for that amount. Bring it in to me directly—and have the boy call my car."

When John Rawn ascended the steps of his mansion house that night, he fairly throbbed with the sense of this own self-approval. There was that in his pocket which he thought, when worn by the wife of John Rawn at any public place of display, would indicate what grade of life he, John Rawn, had shown himself fit to occupy. He lost no time in summoning his wife, and with small ado put in her extended hand the little mass of trembling, shivering gems. She gazed at them almost stupefied.

"Well, well," he broke out, "can't you say anything? What about it? They're yours."

"Oh, John!" she began. "John! What do you mean? How could you—how could I—"

For one moment he looked at her, and she shrank back from his gaze. But Rawn's anger turned to self-pity. "My own wife won't wear my diamonds," said he.

She came now, and put her arms about his neck, the first time in years, but not in thankfulness. She looked straight into his eyes. "John!" she said. "Oh, John!" There was all of woman's anguish in her eyes, in her voice.

CHAPTER IV.

At Headquarters.

Halsey and his wife, John Rawn's daughter, had taken up their residence in the small Chicago suburb in which the central plant had been located. Their cottage was a small one, and it was furnished much like other cottages thereabout, occupied by salaried men, mechanics, persons of no great means. It retained something of the complexion of the old quarters in Kelly Row.

Naturally, Halsey was often taken to the central offices in the city for conferences with the president of the company. He frequently met there Virginia Delaware, even at times gave dictation to her—a thing he never failed to remember, but never remembered to mention in his own home. As so many men aside in this divorcee's case, he set aside comparisons, forced himself into loyalty.

On one such occasion he found himself in the position known among salaried workers as being "called upon the carpet" before "the old man." Rawn held a letter in his hand to which he referred as he chided Halsey for the delay in his department of the work.

"Do you suppose I can stand for this sort of thing coming from New York?" he began. "What's the matter out there with you?"

"There's something I don't understand about it, Mr. Rawn. The men are very sulky. The foremen told me that they never had so much trouble. Of course, they don't understand it themselves, but it's just as though our secret was getting out, and as if the men were afraid of cutting their own throats when they build these machines. Not that they understand what it's all about—it's all right yet, that's sure."

"You begin to see some of the practical results of your internal socialistic ideas, don't you, then? You'll come to my notion of life after a while."

"Mr. Rawn, what's the end of that? What's the logical conclusion?"

"Well, I'll tell you! One end and logical conclusion is going to be that I'll get some one to handle that factory if you can't, and he'll handle it the way I tell him!"

"You want my resignation now?"

"I'd very likely take it if it weren't for Grace. Besides, we've started on this thing together, and moreover again, I want you, when I go to New York, to see the directors and explain to them that their impatience is all wrong."

"Is there much dissatisfaction down there?"

"Yes. We've both got to run down east to-morrow night. Go on out now, and reserve four compartments on the limited."

"Yes—we'll want a place to eat and work on the road. I've got to take a stenographer along, of course."

"Then you couldn't use the stenographer on the train—I mean the regular one?"

"I could not, Mr. Halsey," said John Rawn idly. "What business is it of yours?"

"None in the least. I was only thinking about any possible talk. She's a very beautiful girl, and very—stunning. All right, Mr. Rawn, I'll be ready to start to-morrow, and I'll count on getting back here by the last of the week, at least. Good day, sir."

He left the room quietly. He was a handsome, stalwart young man, but in some way his face did not look happy.

"That may all be very well," commented one of the members at the directors' meeting of the International Power Company, held on the day of Rawn's arrival in New York. "That may all be true, but what do we know about the practical application? I've heard of extracting gold from sea water—and the fellow proved it right before your eyes! The world is full of these things, getting rich all at once, but usually when we get to the bottom of it, there's the same old gold brick."

The speaker was rather a slight man, with dark, pointed beard, a man whose name swayed railway fortunes, but whose digestion was not worth mentioning.

"I want all you gentlemen to feel," said John Rawn calmly, "that there's a chance to lay down right here if your feet are getting cold. Better quit now than later on. I won't work with men who haven't got heart in this thing. If any of you are scared, let me know. I couldn't take over all your stock myself, of course, but if you want to let go, I believe I can swing another company organization."

They looked at him silently, here and there a gray head shaking in negation. Rawn's eye lighted.

"That's the ideal!" said he; "we'll all fight!"

He turned to catch the eye of the late objector. "I'm going," said the latter importantly.

"And good riddance!" said John Rawn calmly.

"I'll take care of you for that, one of these days, Mr. Rawn!"

"Why not now?"

"You'll see what I'll do to you in the market."

"The market be—?" said John Rawn. "There isn't anything to buy or sell. If there is any stock offered, I'm the market, right here and now. Go on and do what you can."

Halsey rose and placed on the table the little model which he took from his coat at his side. In principle, it was the same which had been shown in the original demonstration at St. Louis, long before, although in workmanship it was in this instance a trifle more finished, showing more of shining brass and steel. Halsey looked about hesitatingly.

"Small we use the fan again?" he inquired of Mr. Rawn.

"Not on your life!" cut in Ackerman. "No more fan burning goes. You'll put on the little railway, here on the table, as you were showing me the other day."

"You gentlemen all know the general theory of the invention," Halsey went on, again assuming the post of lecturer, which Rawn once more graciously surrendered to him, waving a hand largely in his direction as though in explanation to the others. "It's simply the attuning of a motor to the free electrical current in the air—the wireless kind of course. You're posted on all this. Now, I've got some little things here which will show some of the applications of our idea. We'll make a little truck, for a railway train, and we'll run its motor here with current of our own, simply by our receiver for the free current."

"This thing was there to show for itself. As to the breadth of its application, these men needed no advice. They were accus'nd to the look ahead, to the weighing of wide possibilities."

"That's the travel of the future, gentlemen," said John Rawn soberly, at length. "They can take or leave it. So can you."

Silence fell on that group of gray, grave men. The thing seemed to them unnamable, although no simple. They looked about, one at the other. A sort of high passed about the room. There sat at the table men who represented untold millions of capital. They were looking upon a device which in the belief of all was about to multiply these millions many-fold.

Rawn was the first to break the silence.

"Gentlemen," said he, "of course this is the big part of our company patent, and it is over this that we've met today. You've been doubting my executive ability. I have shown you what the prize is that we're working for—there it is on the table. As to the difficulties of pulling of a thing as big as this, there is bigger in this case than could be expected or figured out in advance. Our superintendent, Mr. Halsey here, tells me that he is having a great deal of trouble in labor matters. The men are discontented, and what is worse, they're curious. All the time. We can't employ just any sort of irresponsible labor, and we can't complete one machine—we've got to bring them all through at once, together—and indeed, got pretty near to finish them all ourselves. We can't take any people in on this secret, of course it all takes time, and it all takes money. What do you want, gentlemen? I don't want to do much more than I have done."

"And it's enough!" cried the bearded man, his voice harsh, strident with his emotion. "We've got to have it! Let's shake it, let's stick, fellows! They'll never shake us off. There is absolutely no limit to this thing."

"Is that still the way you feel, Jim?" asked Standley from his end of the table.

"Yes, it is, how about it, gentlemen?" answered Ackerman's deep voice.

His eyes turned from one to the other, and found no dissent, although the air of each man was earnest, almost scowling.

"Shake hands, then," called out the bearded man with enthusiasm, a man who had swayed millions by the force of his own convictions before that time.

"Let's all shake hands, then, gentlemen," said John Rawn.

They did so, each man reaching out to his neighbor, Halsey, of course, stopping back as he belonged to that charmed circle.

"Move we 'round," said Ackerman. The president dropped the gavel on the table top.

Rawn finally escaping from the crowd of importunate reporters who waited in the halls, at length broke away to go to his rooms. He met Halsey in the hallway. The latter had in his hand a telegram, which shook somewhat as he extended it.

"Well," said Rawn, turning toward him with a frown, "what is it?"

He read "Charles S. Halsey, The Palatka, New York. Your child is a girl. Is mother is doing well. You would best return at once. There is a slight deformity. You must share this grief with the mother when she knows."

Rawn dropped the message to the floor. Halsey's face looked so despondently old and sad that for one moment Rawn almost forgot his own grief. "You'd better go on home, Charles," he said. "Too bad to get such news now! But isn't that just like a woman!"

CHAPTER V.

In Proper Person.

John Rawn stood looking at the unconscious through the corridors of the glided hotel. Warmth, music, a Babel of voices, were all about. There approached a little group of laughing men coming from the carriage entrance, bound, no doubt, to a banquet hall somewhere under the cavernous roof. One voice rose above the others as the group advanced. There appeared, rapidly talking and gesticulating as he came, a ruddy-faced, stocky figure, with head close cropped, jaw underneath, small eyes, fighting terrier "make-up."

"I tell you, gentlemen, I'll compromise not in the least on this matter! It makes no difference what they do with the ticket or with me. There's only one way about these matters, and that's the right way! I care nothing whether this man be a rich man or a poor man. The only question is, whether he be a liar, or whether he be a truth-teller. If he is a liar, he will never—I say to you, gentlemen—this with close-shut jaw and set hard smitten into palm—I say to you, it makes no difference who he is or what he is, he'll never win through; and in the event you suffer from us."

He passed on, gesticulating, talking, men commented audibly, for there was no mistaking a man idealized by some, derided by others, scorned by none, anathematized by not a few. He was at address that night a meeting of independent politicians, so called, here in the very house of individualistic power, and many old-line members of his party had their doubts, the fear of a new party being ever present in the politician's mind—the same fear professional politicians, Whigs, Democrats, what-not, had of the new party formed before the Civil War at the command of a people then claiming self-government as their ancient right—as now they again do, do, feeling our third War of Independence.

"Going strong, isn't he?" commented one sardonically, within Rawn's hearing.

"That's all right, my friend," was the smiling answer of yet another. "Strong enough to make a lot of you hunt your holes yet. There's quite a few people in this little old country outside this island—and he's—"

"Nonsense! No chance, not the least chance in the world!"

"You underestimate this new movement," began the other.

"New movement"—you're "progressive" or "got that bee?" A lot of good it'll do you. It will be simply a new line-up following our old and time-tried political methods—it all comes to that, take my word. The people aren't in politics. A lot of professional do our governing for us."

"All the same, there goes the people's candidate!"

"Take him and welcome," was the answer. "Take your candidate. We'll cut him up—it he runs."

They also passed on down the hall, gesticulating, their voices swallowed up with others, arising confusedly. This and that couple or group passed by, also talking, among them many persons obviously of notoriety, importance or distinction, though unknown to their observer. Rawn stood and watched them all. The scene was to before seen her, arrayed in keeping with these other illies of the field. Indeed, his life had given him small acquaintance with conventions, or those who practiced them. He had no mental process of analysis as he gazed at her now, or he might have seen that after all the young woman's costume was no more than one of flimsy blue, draped over a pure and lustrous white. He could not have named the fashion which drew it so daintily close at hip and hem as to reveal frankly all the lines of a figure which needed not to dread revelation for its own sake, whether or not for other sake. He could not have guessed what still belonged to the hand that fashioned this garment, could not have told its cost. To him the young woman was very beautiful, and he was too much confused to be capable of analysis. The courage of the gown, cut square and daintily deep, displayed neck and shoulders white as those of any woman of any city. Her figure gave lines had her costume not added. She was beautiful, yes.

And there was something more, Rawn could not tell what there was some air of excitement of exaltation, some sort of fever about her, upon her. Her eyes alone something Rawn had never noticed there before. Hastily he made such inventory as he might of unanalyzed charms. He arrived at his conclusion, which was, that Virginia Delaware would do.

"You could travel in fast company, my dear girl," said he approvingly.

"What do you mean?" She turned upon him.

"That you could go quite a considerable pace, my dear girl. You'll do. Let me see your hands," he demanded. And in spite of her he cooly took up a hand, examining the shapely fingers. He sighed. "No needle had blackened or roughened them, the typewriter keys had not yet flattened them. I stepped back, looked at her from ad to foot, appraising all her graces, valuing her height and roundness of figure. There was small light in his eye other than that of just approval. She bore out his theory.

"You surprise me," was all he said. "How do you mean, Mr. Rawn?—But you must go, you really must!"

There came a knock at the door. Rawn's negative gesture was positive. After a moment's hesitation the girl stepped into the door and spoke to the maid. "You may return again in a little while, maid," she said. "I'm not quite ready now." In turn she stood with her back against the door, her own color rising.

"Oh, that will be uneasy," said John Rawn smiling. "This is quite considerable of a hotel, taking it as it is. There won't be any scandal over this."

"I don't think I understand you."

"I'm going in just a minute. But I want to say something to you in the way of a business proposition, Miss Delaware."

"I'm sure I don't know what you mean," her head was high, her color still rising.

Nothing in the least wrong, my dear girl," said John Rawn. "I simply a matter of business, as I've said. You're here as my assistant, of course. But did it ever occur to you that as you stand there now, and as I stand there, we might pass in that crowd below there and not be known by any one?"

She stood looking at him, her color high, undecided as to his meaning, now now as he went on.

"It would be rather a pleasant experience, perhaps, for you—as it would be for me—just to mingle with that giddy throng—say, for dinner. Would you like to be part of it? It's just a foolish thought that came to me."

She turned to him, her eyes bright, her face eager. "Could we, Mr. Rawn?" she said. "I'm crazy over it!"

"I see," he commented dryly. "You were dressing to go down to dinner?"

"No, no, I couldn't afford to do that, of course. I couldn't go alone, and I had no company. I wasn't going down at all. I just dressed up—to—"

"Just to look at yourself in the mirror, isn't that it, Miss Delaware?"

"Yes, that's the truth! She turned to him calmly at last, well in hand again. "I couldn't be one of them—couldn't be like those people down here—no, I did the best I could up here—I dressed as much like them as I knew how. I—I imagined! I dreamed, Mr. Rawn. I've never known anything of the sort in all my life—but it's in my blood. I want to go, I want to dine, and drink, and dance—I'm mad about it, I know, but it's the truth! I want what I can't have. I want to be what I'm not. I don't know what's the reason. It's in the air—maybe it's in the day, in the country."

"Yes, it's in the country," said John Rawn. "We're all going a swift pace, men and women both. I don't blame you. I understand you. Now I know what you want."

"You want just about what I want."

"It's the same thing—its power that you want, just as I do. I feel it in the air when I come near you. You feel the same way when you come near me!"

She nodded rapidly, her eyes narrowing. "Yes, it's true!" she said. "That's true."

"You want to have it within your ability to influence men, just as I do, don't you, Miss Delaware? That's what was in your soul when you stood before my mirror when I came in, wasn't it, Miss Delaware? You want to win, to succeed, to triumph, don't you, Miss Delaware? You've got ambition? What you were imagining, isn't that what you were imagining, as you stood there and looked in your glass?"

"Yes, yes, it's true, I know it!" she admitted panting. "I know it, my God! yes, I can't help it! But what chance have I?"

All sorts of chances, my dear girl, I don't make mistakes. I told you that. You all he said. He had never his liking. The stir, the confusion, appealed to him. The flowering of the great city's night life was here, such as that is. It was the focus of our country's civilization, such as that is. Men worth millions passed, shoulder to shoulder, a wondrous procession, such as that is.

And here and there, always moving and mingling with those men whose reception or whose rejection announced them as persons of importance, moved women, beautiful women, floating by brightly, radiantly, rustlingly—women blazoning with jewels, women with bright eyes, women whose apparel bespoke their acceptance of integers of the city's vast human sum.

Rawn stood studying the procession for a long time, eyeing group after group carefully. A conclusion was forming in his mind. He was learning that when a man has achieved power, success, wealth, notoriety even, he speaks then as accepted integers of the city's vast human sum.

And then it occurred to John Rawn with sudden and unappealing force that, although he was among this throng, he was not of it. Himself a man of power, success, yes, even of wealth, he lacked in certain betokening appearances (here, a not unusual wave of self-pity crept slowly over him. Why should he, a man of his attainments, lack in any degree what others had?

He stood pondering, not wholly happy, until presently he felt, rather than saw, a glance bent upon him by a man he passed, a glance which well-garbed young woman upon his arm. It was a man now in faultless evening dress, yet easily to be recognized—none less, indeed, than the dyspeptic director who so summarily had been dismissed by John Rawn himself not three hours ago. His dark face became even darker as he saw the "victor" of the dinner standing here alone.

He smiled sardonically. To Rawn it seemed that he smiled because he saw the solitary attitude of a man as good as himself, as fit as himself for all the insignia of power, yet publicly self-contented as well as self-insignia. He started, then, frowned. He had shown these men, these influential magnates in New York, that he could be their master upon occasion—he had mastered this man passing under. Yet now he stood here alone, with no woman to advertise his power to the world; and men laughed at him! No woman would be like, displayed his jewels. He was John Rawn, born to the purple; yet he might be taken here for a country merchant on his first trip from home.

He turned to the key-counter. The clerk, with inflexible instinct—without the aid of Mr. Rawn's acquaintance, and knowing money when he saw it—went up two flights in the elevator, turned into the left-hand corridor, and at length knocked deliberately at a door where a light showed.

"Come!" called a soft voice. He knocked again, a trifle hesitant, and looked down the corridor, each way. The voice repeated, "Come!" He pushed open the door.

Virginia Delaware stood before her dressing-glass, her toilet for evening completed except perhaps for a touch about her coiffure. She turned now, and as she saw her visitor.

"Mr. Rawn!" she exclaimed. "I thought it was the maid! I had just called her."

"Rawn turned and what the door 'Never mind her,' he said. 'I will be gone in a minute. I just wanted—' 'You must go!' she exclaimed.

"You ought not to have come—it is not permitted—it is not right!"

"How stunning you look, Miss Delaware!" was all he said. He had never before seen her, arrayed in keeping with these other illies of the field. Indeed, his life had given him small acquaintance with conventions, or those who practiced them. He had no mental process of analysis as he gazed at her now, or he might have seen that after all the young woman's costume was no more than one of flimsy blue, draped over a pure and lustrous white. He could not have named the fashion which drew it so daintily close at hip and hem as to reveal frankly all the lines of a figure which needed not to dread revelation for its own sake, whether or not for other sake. He could not have guessed what still belonged to the hand that fashioned this garment, could not have told its cost. To him the young woman was very beautiful, and he was too much confused to be capable of analysis. The courage of the gown, cut square and daintily deep, displayed neck and shoulders white as those of any woman of any city. Her figure gave lines had her costume not added. She was beautiful, yes.

And there was something more, Rawn could not tell what there was some air of excitement of exaltation, some sort of fever about her, upon her. Her eyes alone something Rawn had never noticed there before. Hastily he made such inventory as he might of unanalyzed charms. He arrived at his conclusion, which was, that Virginia Delaware would do.

"You could travel in fast company, my dear girl," said he approvingly.

"What do you mean?" She turned upon him.

"That you could go quite a considerable pace, my dear girl. You'll do. Let me see your hands," he demanded. And in spite of her he cooly took up a hand, examining the shapely fingers. He sighed. "No needle had blackened or roughened them, the typewriter keys had not yet flattened them. I stepped back, looked at her from ad to foot, appraising all her graces, valuing her height and roundness of figure. There was small light in his eye other than that of just approval. She bore out his theory.

"You surprise me," was all he said. "How do you mean, Mr. Rawn?—But you must go, you really must!"

There came a knock at the door. Rawn's negative gesture was positive. After a moment's hesitation the girl stepped into the door and spoke to the maid. "You may return again in a little while, maid," she said. "I'm not quite ready now."

Nothing in the least wrong, my dear girl," said John Rawn. "I simply a matter of business, as I've said. You're here as my assistant, of course. But did it ever occur to you that as you stand there now, and as I stand there, we might pass in that crowd below there and not be known by any one?"

She stood looking at him, her color high, undecided as to his meaning, now now as he went on.

"It would be rather a pleasant experience, perhaps, for you—as it would be for me—just to mingle with that giddy throng—say, for dinner. Would you like to be part of it? It's just a foolish thought that came to me."

She turned to him, her eyes bright, her face eager. "Could we, Mr. Rawn?" she said. "I'm crazy over it!"

"I see," he commented dryly. "You were dressing to go down to dinner?"

"No, no, I couldn't afford to do that, of course. I couldn't go alone, and I had no company. I wasn't going down at all. I just dressed up—to—"

"Just to look at yourself in the mirror, isn't that it, Miss Delaware?"

"Yes, that's the truth! She turned to him calmly at last, well in hand again. then, tell me, why did you log out this way?"

"I did because I had to. I told you I couldn't help it. It was in my blood tonight!"

"Any man waiting anywhere, Miss Delaware?"

"On my word, not I wasn't even going downstairs. But I told you I was mad to be in that crowd where the rich people are. I wanted to hear the music, I wanted to see them—I wanted to pretend for one night that I was a part of it all."
